NETHERLANDS CHAPTER

The following are notes taken by Peter Kellow during the presentation

The last century was a social era. Housing was built by the city councils, they planned everything

But in the 1990s everything was liberalized and private money was used. Private developers started to decide the designs.

All state funded building is still Modernist

New books on traditional styles have appeared

A highly debated building was a hotel in Zaandam. 85% liked it

Wealthy people still build in traditional styles

But the prefab box is making a comeback

Good new traditional architecture has opened the eyes of the public

My solution is to make the City of the Future the City of Yesterday
